Welcome to Osnabrück

Living together in solidarity – that's what Osnabrück as the City of Peace stands for. It is the birthplace of the writer Erich Maria Remarque, who wrote the world-famous novel "All Quiet on the Western Front", and the painter Felix Nussbaum, who was murdered in Auschwitz and for whom star architect Daniel Libeskind built a museum. And historically important not only for the town but for entire Europe is the Westphalian Peace which was concluded here in 1648.

The romantic old part of the city, the many pedestrian zones, arcades and promenades, the university and the colleges, the countless companies of international standing and the high-class cultural and free-time activities make Osnabrück a great place to have a conference.

Heaven on Earth – that's what the Osnabrück countryside stands for: rich green meadows and extensive woods, clear water and clean air. This is where Arminius defeated the Romans and where the Battle of the Teutoburg Forest took place. Findings at the excavation site around the Varus Battle Museum in the Park Kalkriese testify this historical event. Also the discovery of 150-million-year-old dinosaur "footprints" in a stone quarry in the Wiehen Hills provide evidence of the history of this region.

The beautiful landscape with its many natural springs and rivers, the charming castles, the representative half-timbered houses and the scenic landmarks, as well as the outstanding infrastructure invite you to have a relaxing conference in Osnabrück and to explore this magnificent countryside.

April 1-4 2007
Osnabrück Germany

Dear colleagues,

on behalf of the Vereinigung für Allgemeine und Angewandte Mikrobiologie (VAAM), we cordially invite you to attend the Annual Conference to be held in Osnabrück from April 1 – 4, 2007.

The scientific programme (plenary sessions) will focus on sociomicrobiology, survival strategies, metabolic networks as well as on posttranscriptional regulation and modifications. Other topics, which will cover most of the relevant areas of microbiology, will be discussed in workshops (e.g. bacterial cell biology), short lectures, and poster sessions. Take this opportunity to have a look at the thriving present and future of our field. Our industry partners are invited to present new products and their latest developments.

We welcome you all to Osnabrück and we are looking forward to meeting you. Your active participation will make this conference an exciting scientific event.

Yours

K. Altendorf, E.P. Bakker, J. Heinisch, K. Jahreis, A. Lorberg, H. Schrempf
